

GETTING YOUR GARDEN
READY FOR WINTER

SEASON;
AUTUMN

Preparing your garden for the winter is definitely a job worth doing. If you invest a bit of time protecting your plants and clearing up now, it will make springtime more worthwhile. The autumn months are ideal to make sure everything is ready for winter, then you can relax indoors and look forward to a tidy garden and blooming bulbs in spring.

Here are some handy hints to getting your garden ready for winter:

Protect young trees

Invest in some plastic or wire mesh guards to protect the delicate trunks of new trees and shrubs and keep frost, snow and vermin at bay over winter.

Give your lawn some TLC

Autumn is the time to give your grass one last mow and treat it with fertiliser so you can wake up to a lush lawn in spring. It is also a good time to give your lawnmower a service and get any blades sharpened.

Get rid of weeds

Make sure you're up to date with weeding and don't be tempted to throw anything with seeds into your compost. Cut back hedges, bushes and trees.

Plant your spring bulbs

It's time to plan ahead and plant your spring bulbs before there's any danger of the ground freezing solid, then you can look forward to daffodils and tulips in spring.

Check your fences and sheds

Be ready for the wet and windy weather by making sure your fences are well maintained and sheds are watertight and secure.

Put your garden furniture away

Now's the time to clean up your garden furniture, wrap it in plastic and put it in a safe, waterproof location so it's ready to use again in spring.

Clean up leaves

Get into the habit of clearing leaves away from your lawn each week, rather than leaving it until it's completely covered as they can weaken the grass by blocking daylight and air. Autumn leaves can also be a useful tool. Try shredding them and using them as winter mulch to give your flower beds a treat.

Don't give up watering your trees just yet

Carry on watering evergreens until the ground freezes. They will still need moisture as winter approaches because they do not lose their leaves.
